

polka dogs

The Polka Dogs are another kettle of fish, so to speak. This fall is the 20th anniversary of the band's appearance on the Toronto music/theatre/dance scene. They were the musical engine for a number of theatre and dance projects under the direction of John Millard but they also had a dedicated club and concert following in Canada and Europe which kept them touring regularly.

Back from the 90's, John Millard's band that wowed the world with its explosive, raucous, joyous sound of trombone, tuba, accordion, banjo, drums and that sultry, fantastic voice with lyrics that make your heart leap and your imagination soar.

They're back for a visit to the Young Centre, all five of the original band members: Tom Walsh on trombone, Tiina Kiik on accordion, Colin Couch on tuba, John Millard on banjo and vocals and Ambrose Pottie on drums.

If you've never heard of them, don't miss them. If you have heard of them, it's not possible to miss them.
